- Disposable gloves
- Fixer, if necessary

Batik fun is unique: Each dyeing result is a personal unique. Our idea "bag batik" also explains how well batik can be combined with the stenciling technique.

Batiks explained step by step

Step 1: Tie or knot your piece of fabric in the desired places. For this you can use a string, cable ties or similar or knot your piece of fabric at the desired place. The areas that are covered will later remain lighter or completely white. The tighter the Ribbon or the knot, the greater the color difference!

Step 2: Carefully read the instructions for your particular paint product and fill the container, such as a bucket, with an appropriate amount of water and stir the Textile paint according to the package instructions. Now put your cloth utensil into the dye bath for about 1 hour. The longer it remains in the dye bath, the more intensive the dyeing. If necessary, now place the fabric piece in your fixing bath. (see package instructions)

Step 3: Then rinse off the excess paint from the still hardened part of the fabric under warm water. Rinse it out until the water remains clear. Now you can loosen the knot or remove the ties and rinse your piece of fabric again.

Step 4: Leave to dry and iron if necessary, and your batik piece is ready!

Batiks with several colours

If you want to dye with more than one colour, first batik the lightest colour and then dye with the darker colours further. To do this, loosen some or all of the ties between them and, if necessary, set them again

Different batik patterns

When batiking, you have many possibilities for batik patterns by using different tie-ups. You can, for example, lift your piece of fabric upwards at some points and tie them off with Ribbon . This creates the typical batik circles. Another possibility is to pull up your garment in the middle and twist it. Then the patterns look almost like marbled. Or you can fold your garment or fabric and get a striped look. Of course you can also knot, fold or tie up your piece of fabric at will and get a purely random pattern.

Have fun trying it out!
